

Reference Letter for Eugene Physical Therapy

I was employed by Eugene PT for almost 6 years, leaving in 2013 only because my family and I decided to move out of the area. There is no doubt that, if we stayed in Eugene, I would have stayed with EPT. Over the last 15 years, I have worked at 3 clinics as an aide, 4 clinics as a PT student, and 4 clinics as a PT. I can say, without hesitation, that Eugene PT is a top-notch place to work if you value teamwork, mentoring, quality one-on-one care, and being part of an institution in the community. Jeff and Christy work tirelessly to ensure EPT is not only a great place to work but also is well respected by both patients and referring providers.

I came to Eugene as a relatively new-grad and left having gained extensive experience in sports medicine, manual therapy, post-op rehab, chronic pain, adolescent orthopedics, and geriatric care. This is due to the PT staff regularly not only setting aside time for one-on-one mentoring but also regular group email case study sharing, journal article reviews, and staff meetings. Jeff taught me too much to ever fit into a letter but some particular tid-bits stick out in my mind. Never let your patients leave the clinic with a limp. Always advocate for your patients to achieve 100% recovery. Be constructively critical of yourself as a clinician.

In addition to the clinical and business management aspects of EPT, the front office staff is outstanding. They are always on top of insurance authorizations, equipment/supplies, keeping schedules tight and full, and updating charts. They are friendly with patients, organized, and generally just nice people to work with.

Eugene Physical Therapy not only wants to succeed, they want you, as a clinician, to succeed with your clients AND with your career. They are evidenced based, open to new ideas, efficient, effective, and, most importantly, fun. Being a PT is hard work. Working at Eugene PT was a privilege and a pleasure.

Here's to hoping you make the right decision for your career.

Feel free to contact me if you have more questions.

Peter Schrey, DPT, OCS, CSCS